SUPERIOR GENERAL TO ALL THE MISSIONARIES OF ST. FRANCIS DE SALES

My dear Confreres:

I greet you in the joy of the Lord who has called each one of us to live in the spirit of St. Francis de Sales and in the missionary zeal of Father Peter Mermier. Most of you have already attended the Congregational Retreat or you are going to attend it in view of deepening your sense of identity as MSFS and your commitment to the Church through consecrated life. This Retreat is a preparatory step for us to journey in the spirit of the General Chapter 2013. The call of the GC 2013 continues to echo in our Congregation, 'I want Missions': MSFS - Mystics of God's Love for Prophetic Ministries today. This is the re-statement of religious missionary commitment of our Founder and of the legacy of our pioneering missionaries. We are repeatedly reminded that the only way to fight the evils of consecrated life today – a heightened individualism, a crisis of identity, and a cooling of fervor – (as rightly observed by Pope Francis) is through a union with God resulting from our daily personal prayer and community prayer.

Karl Rahner once stated that 'if Western Christianity does not re-discover its mystical foundations and roots, we might close the doors of the Churches'. It is happening already in some parts of the world. He was right because without a contemplative mind, without being a mystic of God's Love, and without an experience of communion with God at some level, we cannot learn to think as Jesus thought.

- We don't have the power to live our consecrated life and our missionary zeal like that of St. Francis de Sales and Father Mermier except in and through union with God.
- Until confreres have some level of inner religious experience, there is no point in asking them to follow the ideals of consecrated life and missionary life
- Without an inner experience of union with God, all our noble desires and attempts to live the ideals and doctrinal affirmation would be a source of anxiety
- Without this inner experience of belongingness to God exclusively and completely as always validated by our Patron, there is no future for consecrated life

- Without this inner experience of communion with God we cannot have compassion for people, a quality of St. Francis de Sales recommended to us by Father Mermier
- A spiritual leader who lacks basic human compassion has almost no power to change other people, because people intuitively know he or she does not represent the Divine Truth
- Such leaders have to rely upon role, laws, and enforcement powers to effect any change in others.

The goal of the Congregational retreat is to strengthen our resolve to carry our charism to the frontiers of the world and to the periphery of the society. All of us in Administration, Leadership, Formation, Education, Mission, and Social Ministry - with our degrees and positions and vast experiences - need to find time to step out into the periphery and frontier missions and see and interpret the world and our charism from the periphery.

We need to re-capture our missionary legacy by leaving our nests and moving into where the Lord is calling us and not where we want to get ourselves invited and settled down. Our vocation as Religious and as MSFS (who are trained philosophers, theologians, psychologists, Educationists, Sociologists, Business Managers, Pastoral care-givers, and Specialists in different disciplines) is to step out and look at the world from the periphery and move toward that direction with our charism as Father Mermier and our pioneers did.

Our decisions in the General and Provincial Council Meetings, policies, formation programs, various institutionalized ministries, and future plans should emerge from staying close to the people at the periphery and not merely looking at the reality from the center of our established zones.

I love this quote from Pope Francis: ‘The priest who seldom goes out of himself ... misses out on the best of our people, on what can stir the depths of his priestly heart. ... This is precisely the reason why some priests grow dissatisfied, lose heart and become in a sense collectors of antiquities or novelties – instead of being shepherds living with ‘the smell of the sheep.’ This is what I am asking you – be shepherds with the smell of sheep’.

1. 2015 – YEAR FOR MISSION IN THE CONGREGATION

Pope Francis has already declared YEAR 2015 as Year dedicated to those in consecrated life. We add another important facet to the Year for Consecrated Life in our Congregation. The General Council Meeting held in MSFS Provincial House in Morogoro, Tanzania has decided to declare Year 2015 as Year for Mission in the Congregation. We dedicate the whole year for strengthening our rural missions and frontier missions and tapping the human resources in the Congregation for missionary leadership in rural and frontier missions.

I am glad to declare Year – 2015 as Year for Mission in our Congregation.

General Secretary for Mission, Fr. Agnelo Fernandes, in collaboration with the Provincial Councilor In Charge of Mission and the Provincial Administration of all Provinces through the Mission Forums, is entrusted with the responsibility of working out a road map to channelize our rich missionary energy to the poor, rural and frontier missions of the Congregation. You are welcome to give your valuable suggestions and proposals to make the Year for Mission 2015 a year of blessing and grace for the Congregation and for the people we serve. Please send your suggestions to the Secretary for Mission which will help us in the formulation of guidelines and principles for Mission Year 2015. This is a year for all of us to think congregationally in merging our resources together and promoting our collective visibility as a missionary congregation at a time when we most need missionary dynamism.

2. FRANCIS FACTOR CONTINUED ...

In SG-AB-04, I shared with you two areas of the Question and Answer session with Pope Francis at the Union of Superiors General Meeting in November 2013. Let me complete the Q and A session with the Pope:

Pope Francis was asked to give his guidance to the concrete situation of the present scenario where vocations from Africa and Asia are on the increase which accounts for most of the total number of vocations to religious life. Consequently we are witnessing a profound change in the human geography of the Church and of religious Congregations. This poses a series of challenges like inculturation of the charism, vocational discernment and the selection of candidates, the challenge of inter-religious dialogue, and search for an equitable representation in the governmental organizations of the Congregations, and in the structure of the Church.

- Pope Francis says that he is well aware of the many geographical changes in consecrated life and that “all cultures are able to be called by the Lord that he is free to stir up more vocations in one part of the world than in another”. What does the Lord wish to say by sending us vocations from the youngest Churches? I don’t know. But I ask myself the question. We have to ask it. The Lord’s will is somehow in all this.
- There are Churches who are bearing new fruit. At one time they perhaps were not so fertile, but they are now. This necessitates, of course, rethinking the inculturation of the charism. The charism is one but, as Saint Ignatius used to say; it needs to be lived according to the places, times and persons. The charism is not a bottle of distilled water. It needs to be lived energetically as well as reinterpreted culturally.

- But in this way there is the danger of making a mistake, you say, of committing errors. It is risky. Certainly, certainly: we will always make mistakes, no doubt about it. But this should not stop us, because there is the chance of making worse mistakes. In fact we should always ask for forgiveness and look shamefully upon apostolic failures due to a lack of courage.
- Inculturating the charism, therefore, is fundamental, and this never means relativizing it. We must not make the charism rigid or uniform. When we make our cultures uniform we kill the charism,” the Pontiff concluded decisively, indicating the necessity of “introducing persons of various cultures into the central governance of the Orders and Congregations, who express diverse ways of living the charism.”
- He also spent some time on the vocation of brothers and, more generally, religious who are not priests. He complained that an adequate awareness of this specific vocation has not yet been developed. “I do not actually believe that the vocational crisis among religious who are not priests is a sign of the times telling us that this vocation has ended. We should rather understand what God is asking us.” Answering a question concerning religious brothers as superiors in clerical orders, the Pope replied that this was a canonical issue that needs to be dealt with at that level.

Pope was asked about how religious should live together in community as brothers? How can we keep commitment to the mission/apostolate and community life? How can we combat the tendency towards individualism in religious life? How should we act toward confreres in difficulty or who live or create conflict? How can we combine justice and mercy in difficult cases?

- Community life has an enormous power to call people together. The illnesses (conflicts) of the community, on the other hand, have power that destroys. The temptation against community life is that which is the most disruptive to progress in consecrated life. Saint John Berchmans used to say that his greatest penance was precisely community life.
- Sometimes living in community is difficult, but if it is not lived it is not productive. Work, even that which is ‘apostolic’ can become an escape from community life. If a person cannot live in community he cannot live religious life. “Religious brotherhood” — continued the Pope — “with all its possible diversity, is an experience of love that goes beyond conflicts.
- Community conflicts are inevitable: in a certain sense they need to happen, if the community is truly living sincere and honest relationships. That’s life. It does not make sense to think of living in a community in which there are confreres who are not experiencing difficulties in their lives. Something is missing from communities where there is no conflict. Reality dictates that there are conflicts in all families and all groups of people. And conflict must be faced head on: it should not be ignored. Covering it over just creates a pressure cooker that will eventually explode. A life without conflicts is not life."

(We know that one of the fundamental principles of Pope Francis is that "unity is superior to conflict." His words to religious should be read in light of Evangelii gaudium (n. 226-230), where he wonders about "the acceptance of bearing conflict, of resolving it and transforming it into a link that leads to a new process" (227). It is important to recall that for Bergoglio personal fulfillment is never an exclusively individual undertaking, but collective, communitarian. Conflict in this sense can, and even should evolve in a process of maturation).

- In any case conflict must be approached with spiritual counseling: "We should never act like the priest or Levite in the parable of the Good Samaritan, who just walked by. But what should we do? We have to recapture tenderness. Think of the tenderness that Saint Francis lived, for example. Tenderness helps to overcome conflicts. If this is insufficient, it might be necessary to change communities.
- "It is true," — Pope Francis continued — "sometimes we are very cruel. We all experience the temptation to criticize for personal satisfactions or to gain personal advantage. Sometimes the problems in community life are due to fragile personalities, in which case the help of a professional, a psychologist, should be sought. There is no need to be afraid of this: one need not fear necessarily succumbing to psychologism. But never, never should we act like managers when dealing with conflicts in the brotherhood. We should involve the heart.
- Community life is a delicate thing. In the hymn of First Vespers of the Solemnity of Saint Joseph in the Argentine breviary the Saint is asked to take care of the Church with ternura de eucaristía, 'Eucharistic tenderness.' This is how we should treat brothers in the community: with Eucharistic tenderness. We need to caress conflicts. Tenderness does us good. Eucharistic tenderness does not mask conflict but rather helps us to confront it like people."

Superiors General asked the Pope several questions regarding ministries of religious communities in the context of local Churches and about their relationship with bishops. How can the CHARISM of the Religious Congregations be both respected and promoted for the welfare Church where they live and work?

- Pope Francis answers that the request to review the directive criteria that were promulgated in 1978 by the Congregation for Religious and by the Congregation for Bishops (Mutuae relationes) concerning the relations between bishops and religious in the Church. The Pope is of the opinion that the time is ripe now because "that document was useful at the time but is now outdated. The charisms of the various Institutes need to be respected and fostered because they are needed in dioceses.
- I know by experience the problems" — he continued — "that can arise between a bishop and religious communities." For example: "if the religious decide one day to withdraw from one of their works due to a lack of manpower the bishop often finds himself suddenly left with a hot potato in his hand. I myself have had such difficult experiences. I would be informed that a work was being dropped and I did not know what to do. I was once actually told after the fact.

- On the other hand I can also speak about other, positive developments. The fact is: I know the problems, but I also know that the bishops are not always acquainted with the charisms and works of religious. We bishops need to understand that consecrated persons are not functionaries but gifts that enrich dioceses. The involvement of religious communities in dioceses is important.
- Dialogue between the bishop and religious must be rescued so that, due to a lack of understanding of their charisms, bishops do not view religious simply as useful instruments.” For this reason the Pope confided to the Congregation for Religious the task of resuming reflection on the document Mutuae relationes and to work on a revision. I have shared with you, in summary form, the entire Q and A session of the Superiors General with Pope Francis. Pope has touched upon the various challenges in religious life in response to the Questions.

News from Mission Development Office in Rome

MDO is set up in a small room on the 3rd floor of VDM, Rome. It is well-equipped and quite functional. A common letter was sent to all the Provincials and Mission Superiors informing them about the works done at MDO and the modalities of its functioning. A website is being developed for the MDO in Italian, English, German and French www.amisales.org. Amisalesroma is already on face-book. Advertisements and announcements have been sent to a number of periodicals and magazines in Italy. Some of them have obliged by publishing them free of cost. Two Newsletters in Italian for Christmas and Easter were sent to friends and benefactors in Italy.

Efforts are being made to obtain Mass Intentions for the Missions. Until now the MDO has received over 12 project proposals, all from Africa. Some of them are already submitted to donor agencies. Others are being processed or being facilitated for submission. “Adoption at Distance Program” started by late Fr. Kurian Aranjanil is being continued on behalf of the South-West Province. The donations received for the purpose are sent to the provincial of SW as per an arrangement made by the previous General Administration. Efforts are being made to develop this program further and extend it to all the provinces and missions.

A project of “subsidy for seminarians” in Cameroon and in Mozambique has been initiated much before the starting of MDO in Rome. It is now being continued under Amisales Onlus. Some donations received by Fr. Jose Karekat for the ITSSCAT project in Trivandrum are being channelled through the Amisales and remitted to the Kerala Fransalian Society. The campaign for used stamps, religious articles etc. started by Fr. Kurian is being continued.

The MDO has introduced the ministry at the Mermier Bal Ashram at Koperkhairane, Navi-Mumbai to some friends and benefactors in Germany. The proposal of constituting a Non-Profit Association in Vienna is being pursued. The Director made a visit to some of the MSFS parishes in Franco-Swiss Province in April 2014 and explored the possibilities of establishing support groups in France. The annual statement of accounts of Amisales Onlus has been audited for the third consecutive year namely 2011, 2012 and 2013. Amisales has been duly registered at the Finance Ministry of Italy to receive potential donations under the scheme 5 per mille.

4. REPORT ON THE VISITATION OF THE SUPERIOR GENERAL TO THE BRAZIL PROVINCE (March 15 – April 02, 2014)

The visitation was thoroughly planned out by Fr. Eldin Singarayan, one of the Provincial Councilors (then Administrator) in consultation with late Fr. Bugnon, then Provincial. Due to severe health problems related to cancer that had affected Father Bugnon for more than a year, he was not able to talk, eat, exercise ministry, and function in his office. He had delegated Fr. Eldin to organize the visitation of the Superior General.

The visitation from March 15, 2014 through April 02, 2014 was scheduled with the itinerary and various programs and meetings in each center. The objectives and dynamics of the visitation were prepared and distributed to each Local Community. We have 20 confreres (including one temporarily professed confrere), one novice, and two seminarians in the Brazil Province in the 6 Local communities established in 5 different States. Geographically they are quite distant from each other and this geographical distance impacts also the personal distance and community life in the Province among confreres.

DYNAMICS OF THE VISITATION

- Personal meeting, community meeting, community prayers, visits and masses at the different centers, arranged meetings with the Bishops of the respective dioceses
- Meeting with the confreres and Local Community was done through an interpreter who translated from English to Portuguese

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE VISITATION

- Visited with Father Bugnon, the Provincial, and discussed with him the state of the Province. - At the request of the confreres of the Brazil Province, Administrator requested the General Council to make services of Father Tomson Aerathedathu available to the Province. With the approval of the North East Provincial Administration, the General Administration, and with his own consent, Father Tomson has joined the Brazil Province for the next 10 years with his active and passive voice in the Province

My dear Confreres:

Let me conclude this long circular with my deep appreciation for all what you are and what you do for the service of the Lord's mission and for disseminating the spirituality of St. Francis de Sales and the missionary dynamism of Father Mermier, the special charism of our Congregation. Thank you for your patient reading. Let the words of Father Mermier continue to resound in our ears and hearts: "My resolve is unshakeable, my longings are the same. I want mission work"

United with you in prayer,

Live Jesus!
